- If they don't have a resume, it should be the system default from the profile 0which we need to make brand font colors and fonts types and download name should be creatives name (this one was 4461-james-cocaro) need only name)

Right now it's doing both:

About

Hi, I'm James. Also known as the Version King and voted Grandma's Biggest Fan since 2008. If I'm not creating cutting-edge designs or strategizing big ideas, you can find me curating the perfect playlist for leg day. And I've got to stay in shape because who else is going to carry your agency's culture on their back? Friends say I'm magnetic. Co-workers say I'm charming. I say being detail-oriented and wildly creative can co-exist. Want me to show you how?

About

From sloppywriter to copywriter

Some creatives are born knowing their lives are destined for advertising. I'm not one of them. But I did have enough sense as an undergrad to realize I'm a writer. After graduating with my creative writing degree, I sold everything I owned except for a few boxes of books and some clothes and moved to Seoul, South Korea. Like most expats who move to Korea "for a year or two to explore the world while I figure my life out", I fell in love with the culture and stayed for several more. I taught English, became a kimchi connoisseur, haphazardly kept a journal, made friends from every continent except Antarctica, wrote a novel, learned to awkwardly fumble my way through basic Korean conversation, organized a weekly writing workshop, explored the region, and became addicted to psychology books and board game cafes. What does any of this have to do with advertising? In my opinion, everything. Faced with the same existential dilemma as pretty much every expat who moves abroad to teach English with a humanities degree—this is a blast, but what's next?—I eventually found advertising. Researching a typical day in the life of a copywriter, it seemed I'd finally discovered my field. After all, how many occupations offer that perfect cocktail of armchair psychology, writing and storytelling, art, conceptual and strategic thinking, salesmanship, creative collaboration, empathy, neverending cultural curiosity, and breadth of mediums? Eager to confirm my suspicion, I cold emailed a few agencies as soon as I got back to Dallas to ask if I might shadow.

Two and a half years later, I was on the bus in Seattle when I heard one of my broadcast radio spots for the first time. My script was speaking to public bus drivers, inviting them to "Drop off stressful working conditions and pick up better compensation by applying today"—that is, for a laidback, high-paying corporate shuttle route. I smiled at the synchronicity of the moment, imagining that somewhere on the road, or perhaps just a couple seats in front of me, was a bus driver who'd just been wondering, as we all do at times, What's next?

There's a file in WP packages outside of the 3 packages. It's called Hire an Advisor. It's not turned on. I will to activate that and a page link to a form for Agencies to answer a few questions in the event they don't want to choose a posting packaging and would prefer to Hire An Advisor to help with their staffing. Then same as Agency permissions change when they have an active package, the same thing will happen with Advisor. So when an Advisor doesn't have a package, they'll have the same permissions as if an Agency had a package which is search name, location, title, private message, invite to apply for a job. However, If an advisor has a package active "Hire An Advisor" then they can do all the advance searches, by all the fields, location, name, title, industry experience, media experience, strengths. etc.

The feature and urgent options are part of the packages and Agencies can select the buttons featured or urgent if they purchase the 2nd or 3rd package. Can you please make sure that function aligns on the back end and front end?

For the Featured and Urgent. The admin can make a agency, job, creative featured or urgent. The creative can not do either (featured or urgent). The agency should be able to turn on or off featured or urgent if they have Multiple/Premium job packages. And don't forget we changed Premium to $649 not $699.

I'm going to edit the landing page in WP minimally to make buttons on the gather inspire. I still need to change all buttons and boxes to have square 90 degree angels versus rounded corners. Everywhere expect the Lounge. And that calendar in the lounge is wonky. I know I sent you the link, but it's just weird. Let's replace black background white type Poppins.

[12:38 PM, 10/2/2023] Erika: Time in 12 hours not 24 hours. Day Date then calendar on the right with a circle on today's date
